Brief

Hurst Joinery worked with contractor Artemis Interiors to deliver a range of bespoke joinery elements for the fit out of prestigious commercial offices for a financial services client. The offices extend to 35,000 sq ft at Exchequer Court in central London.

The brief called for a unique design approach to several key features of the office space, including a new curved concierge desk, a substantial office refreshments counter, innovative audio-visual walls, feature columns, tea points, and photocopier points.

Result

The project transformed the office space. The concierge desk and refreshments counter became focal points of the space, embodying modernity and functionality. The audio-visual walls have added a dynamic touch, while the feature columns and tea points enhanced the contemporary style of the office.

The refurbishment has provided a functional and stylish commercial environment and was well received by the client.
